THE U.S. NAVAL POSTGRADUATE SCHOOL

THE U.S. NAVAL POSTGRADUATE SCHOOL comprises the Engineering School, the General Line School and the Navy Management School. Established in 1909 as the School of Marine Engineering, as a part of the U.S. Naval Academy, it answered the need for advanced education of naval officers.

In 1912 the School of Marine Engineering became the Postgraduate Department of the Naval Academy, and the scope of its engineering curricula was broadened to include Ordnance, Naval Construction, and Civil Engineering. After a suspension of operations during World War I, the Department resumed operations in 1919 in a separate building on the Naval Academy grounds. Two years later it was officially designated the United States Naval Postgraduate School with a further extension of its curricula scope and growth of its enrollment taking place in the years between the two World Wars.

In 1927 the General Line Course was started within the Postgraduate School to acquaint junior line officers with modern developments taking place in the Navy and to broaden their professional knowledge by means of integrated courses in naval science.

World War II caused an increase in enrollment from about 125 to over 600 and a tremendous expansion of activity; in contrast to the period of suspension during World War I. After hostilities ceased in 1945, a program was initiated to relocate the School and improve its professional status. Between 1945 and 1948 legislation was passed granting the right to award Bachelor's, Master's and Doctor's degrees; creating the office of Academic Dean; establishing the School as a separate activity with its own Superintendent; authorizing reestablishment at Monterey, California; and purchasing the Del Monte site. General Line Schools were established at Newport, Rhode Island, and at Monterey, California. The Aerology Department was transferred to Monterey to relieve crowding at Annapolis, but further progress was delayed until 1951. Fresh impetus resulted in the appropriation of funds in 1951 to consolidate the Postgraduate School at Monterey. Consolidation was completed in 1952.

The latest addition to the Naval Postgraduate School, the Navy Management School, was established in 1956. Its mission is to provide an educational program for officers in the application of sound scientific management practice to the complex organizational structure and operations of the Navy with a view toward increasing efficiency and economy of operation.
